

EMPLOYMENT CONTRACT

Between

Infosys Consulting AG
Obstgartenstrasse 27, 8302 Kloten, Switzerland
as the Employer

And

Rajeev Sharma
Arisdorferstrasse 7, 4414 Füllinsdorf BL, Switzerland
as the Employee

1. Position and Duties

This contract of continuous employment takes effect on January 21, 2022. The Employee will hold the position of a Principal.

2. Place of Employment

The contractual place of employment will be the offices of the Employer in Kloten, the job, however, will require that the temporary place of work may be with a client or with other offices of the Employer.

Insofar as necessary for the effective discharge of duties, the Employee will be required to travel to work temporarily at Employer's locations elsewhere and at the premises of customers, suppliers and other organizations with whom the Employer has a business relationship, whether in Switzerland or elsewhere.

3. Working Hours

The annual working hours will be 2080 hours (based on a 100% employment). The annual amount of hours of work is based on an average of 40 hours a week including leave and public holidays. Further details on working hours can be found in the Swiss HR Terms and Conditions (Personalreglement) of the Employer.

4. Vacation Entitlement

The Employee will be entitled to 25 days of paid vacation (leave) per calendar year (pro-rated). The Employee will also be granted paid leave for recognised public holidays at the contractual place of employment.

On commencement and termination of employment the Employee will be treated as having accrued holiday entitlement on a pro-rata basis for each complete calendar month of service in that holiday year, calculated by reference to the Employee's first or last date at work (as appropriate).

5. Salary

The Employer's compensation approach is based on a system of total maximal compensation. This is comprised of an annual (base) salary and an annual maximal bonus.

The annual salary will be CHF 170'000 (gross) including the 13th month salary. The salary is paid monthly (CHF 13'076.95). The usual social contributions will be deducted from the gross salary. 50% of 13th month's salary will be paid in June and the other 50% in December.

Further details on salary payments and conditions can be found in the Swiss HR Terms and Conditions (Personalreglement) of the Employer.

6. Performance Bonus

As a Principal the Employee will participate in the Employer's discretionary bonus system. The actual eligibility criteria to a bonus will be determined by the Company in its absolute discretion.

The current maximal annual bonus is CHF 51'000 (30% of the annual gross base salary). This target will be reviewed on an annual basis at the Employer's sole discretion and grants no right for any bonus payment. Actual payment, if any, will vary depending on the Employee's personal performance and the Employer results, both to be defined at the Employer's discretion.

The bonus scheme is discretionary and the Employer reserves the right to amend or repeal it at any time. Regardless of the actual eligibility conditions as decided by the Employer in its absolute discretion, as applicable, the Employee needs to be in an on-going employment and not under notice of termination when the organization wide payout is made for the said evaluation period and the actual payout for the organization and the Employee has been determined.

7. Insurance

For the time of the employment the Employer shall provide insurance coverage against the consequences of occupational as well as non-occupational accidents.

In case of the Employee's inability to perform his duties under this Employment Contract due to illness, the Employee shall receive his salary according to the terms and conditions of the insurance for loss of earnings due to illness. The Employer shall deduct the Employee's contributions for such loss of earnings insurance from his gross salary.

If there is no insurance for loss of earnings due to illness, the Employer's obligation to continue to pay the Employee's salary is determined by Art. 324a of the Code of Obligations.

8. Probationary Period, Notice Period and Termination

This employment is subject to a 3 month probationary period during which time the Employee's performance will be monitored and assessed. Throughout the probationary period, the employment contract can be terminated by either party giving seven days written notice expiring at the end of the working week. The Employer's usual disciplinary or performance procedures do not apply when termination is the result of an unsatisfactory probationary period.

Following successful completion of the probation, both parties can terminate the employment by written notice for any month's end, subject to the observance of the following notice periods

- Less than 5 years of employment: 2 months
- 5 years of employment and longer: 3 months

Any notice from the Employee to the Employer must be in writing and be handed to, or posted to the relevant Employer Partner at the Employer address. Any notice to the Employee from the Employer will be in writing and either handed to the Employee or posted to the Employee's last known address.

The Employer has the right to terminate the employment without notice [or pay in lieu] in the event of gross misconduct or other fundamental breach of contract on the Employee's part.

During the period of notice the Employer has the right to require the Employee to remain absent from the place of work and not to provide the Employee with any duties. During such period the Employee shall not undertake any duties, whether for reward or otherwise, either on own behalf or for any other person or organisation.

9. Overtime

The annually fixed working hours allow a flexible time schedule, safeguarding the clients' and the Employer's interests as well as one's personal needs. Overtime and any extra hours worked which exceed the contractual or statutory amount of working hours are considered compensated with the regular salary.

Any bonus payment for overtime shall be at the absolute discretion of the Employer and does not vest a claim even if such remuneration would occur on a regular basis.

Overtime of part-time employees shall be compensated at the end of the calendar year. Until the part-time employee has reached the amount of annual working hours of a fulltime employee, the remuneration will be as per the regular salary.

10. Exclusivity

The Employee must not, without the Employer's prior written consent, be in any way directly or indirectly engaged or concerned in any other business or undertaking which is, or is likely to be, in conflict with the interest of the Employer, or where this may adversely affect the efficient discharge of the Employee's duties. The Employee should seek the relevant Employer Partner's consent where any activity may give rise to a breach of this term.

During the life of this contract the Employee is not allowed to conduct any other paid work for third parties or conduct any business on his own account, without the prior and express written permission from the board of directors. Furthermore, the acceptance of a public office or the exercise of unpaid commitments must be communicated and approved in advance if they interfere with the working hours or injure the personal independence or the interests of the Employer. The acceptance of personal membership of a board of directors shall be, at any rate, subject to prior approval from the Employer's country management.

11. Duty of Secrecy and Independence

Confidentiality and secrecy with regard to information of and about our clients is an integral part of our professional ethics. All manufacturing or trade secrets including customer data, technical, organisational and financial information and all other information directly or indirectly related to the business of the Employer or to the business of any customer of the Employer, which is disclosed to the Employee by the Employer or any of its employees and which the Employee gets acquainted with during the employment relationship with the Employer, shall be treated as confidential information. At all times, both during the employment and after the termination thereof, the Employee shall keep such information secret and neither disclose nor make available to third parties any such information and, in particular trade secrets of clients or of the Employer which are not open to the public.

12. Intellectual Property

The Employee agrees that all inventions, designs, improvements and developments made during the employment activity and pertaining to the service to the Employer or as part of his contractual duties, including the proprietary right therein, shall remain the exclusive property of the Employer. The Employee will take any reasonable actions as may be required to assist the Employer in obtaining patents and copyrights on all such inventions, designs, improvements and developments, and protect same against infringement by others.

The Employee further agrees that all inventions, designs, improvements and developments made while performing his employment activity but not during the performance of his contractual duties are assigned to the Employer without further formalities. The Employee shall inform the Employer of such inventions or designs. The Employer shall inform the Employee in writing within 6 months whether it wishes to keep the rights to the invention or the design or to release them to the Employee. In case that the invention or the design is not released to the Employee, the Employer shall pay him/her an adequate compensation within the meaning of Art. 332 (4) Code of Obligations.

The rights to works of authorship (drafts, models, plans, drawings, texts) which the Employee creates while performing his employment activity, whether or not during the performance of his contractual duties, including the right to uses not yet known at this time, are transferred completely and exclusively to the Employer.

13. Obligations at Termination of Employment

The Employee is not allowed to use or make available to a third party any knowledge gained in the course of the employment with the Employer that could be detrimental to the interests of the Employer or its clients.

14. Applicable Law

This Employment Contract is subject to Swiss law.

15. Legal Provisions

This offer is conditional upon the relevant working permissions being granted not later than January 21, 2022. The Swiss HR Terms and Conditions (Personalreglement), the General Expense Regulations (Spesenreglement) and their enclosures hereto, applicable at the time and both as amended from time to time, are integral part of this contract.

By signing this contract the Employee confirms receipt and acceptance of those regulations. In case of doubt the provisions of this contract prevail.
